

Cassie Redlich is a Technical Officer with the Mental Health Flagship program at WHO Regional Office for Europe. She is responsible for the program's work related to the mental health and wellbeing of children, adolescents and young people, incorporating parenting support, promotion/prevention activities and initiatives to strengthen quality of care for children and adolescents. She has 15 years' experience working in national youth mental health agencies in Australia across service delivery, policy and service development roles, and 10 years' experience working with the WHO at the country, regional and headquarter levels on policy, guidance development, emergency response and system reform projects.